Editorial Review

From Booklist

In the fourth volume in the enjoyable series The Buddy Files, Buddy settles into his new role as a therapy dog, but he finds the discipline required in his new job difficult to maintain, feels friction with one of his teachers, and longs for detective work. A mystery soon comes his way when the fire alarm is pulled, and three possible suspects emerge. A secondary story involving a ghost is a red herring readers may detect early on, yet fans will find that Buddy's kind heart and systematic approach to detecting propel the story to a satisfying conclusion. Grades 2-4. --Kara Dean

Kirkus Reviews (8/1/10)

The friendliest and smartest golden retriever on the planet is ready for his next detective mystery, exuberantly jumping in with all paws to discover who pulled the school fire alarm. Buddy, detective dog extraordinaire, is thrilled to become the "therapy dog" at his boy Connor's school when Connor's mom takes him with her to work there. Buddy likes his new job so much that he swears off mysteries until the fire alarm frightens everyone out of the school. Yet there's no fire: Who pulled the alarm? Three very different students might be the culprit. Buddy tracks down clues that help young readers unravel the mystery. Even if Buddy can't communicate with humans as well as he'd like, he feels victorious when the mystery is solved. Buddy has plenty of his animal friends in the neighborhood, and his enthusiasm for every activity and food item he encounters is manifest: Each and every one is his "favorite." Tugeau's sweet line drawings bring Buddy and friends to life, while Butler keeps the story entertaining and sometimes suspenseful. A solid addition to the series. (Mystery. 6-9)

"This adventure is filled with doggy humor, fun, and mystery as Buddy tells the story from his point of view."
